Although Adolphe Sax was born in Belgium in 1814, he achieved his fame in France after moving to Paris in 1842. He led an exciting and colorful life, and, when he died in 1894 at the age of 80, left behind countless inventions of every description. These ranged from fumigation boxes (some of which were ordered by Louis Pasteur) to improved train whistles, and even included an enormous cannon (which was never built).
